Nicoleta Amvrazi, a graduate of the Department of Economics, shares her experience from her studies at the International Hellenic University (IHU) and how the University contributed to her professional career!

«My name is Amvrazi Nikoletta and I am a graduate of the Department of Economics at the International Hellenic University in Serres. My undergraduate studies provided a strong foundation for my professional development, equipping me with comprehensive theoretical knowledge and valuable practical skills. A particularly significant experience was my participation in the Erasmus+ programme, which allowed me to broaden my academic and professional perspectives in an international environment.

In March 2024, I began my professional career at an accounting office in the region of Serres, where I apply in practice the knowledge I acquired during my studies. The connection between theory and everyday professional practice further strengthened my desire for continuous development.

For this reason, I am currently pursuing the postgraduate programme “Applied Economics and Modern Management” at the same department. I feel honored and proud to be a member of the academic and professional community of the Department of Economics, which has played a decisive role in shaping my path so far.»
